

Bazaruto Archipelago, Mozambique

Flying over Bazaruto Archipelago is one of life's great gifts. Its surreal beauty leaves you in open-mouthed wonder while your brain scrabbles to find words to describe what you're seeing. It's almost a physical assault of colour and you have no idea of its exquisite reality until you've experienced it. The tide goes out about 15 kilometres, exposing the underlying sandbanks around the islands of the archipelago, which the local fishermen use as a platform from which to spread their seine nets in the deep-water channels. Photo by Jay Roode, www.sky-hawk.co.za. Find a place to stay in the Bazaruto region at accommodation.getaway.co.za.

Jay has captured this scene faultlessly with an excellent use of colour, composition and perspective.